LONDON, 6th May. Count Schouvaloff, the Russian Ambassador in London, has gone to St. Petersburg on an important mission.

In the House of Commons, in reply to a question, the Chancollor of the Exchequer, Sir Stafford Northcote, said that active negotiations are now proceeding between England and Russia but that under present circumstances discussion on the subject would be injurious. The British Government, he said, had resolved some time be fore upon sending the Indian British Expeditionary force, but had not thought it necessary to inform the House of its determination.

The attention of owners, agents, and charterers of steamers is drawn to the provisions of The Post Office Ordinance, 1876, which comes into force on the 23rd instant. Under the old Ordinance no notice was required of the departure of a vessel if not advertised, nor of departures for Canton or Macao. Notice is now required of any departure, though with regard to sailing ships, the old rule will practically remain in force, that notice need not be sent unless asked for. · Section XXV requires that the first notice be sent to the Post Office.

In the case of steamers plying regularly or on fixed days, notice of any change in the day or hour will be sufficient. Stamped correspondence may still be sent on board aby vessel after the Mail is closed at the

Here and there the fierce sun, from whose active persecution we had just escaped, searched for us through the woods, but its keen blade was dulled and turned aside by intercostal boughs, and its brightness dissipated in nebulous mists throughout the roofing of the dim brown aisles around us. We were in another atmosphere, under another sky, indeed in another world than the dazzling one we had just quitted. The grave silence seemed so much a part of the grateful coolness that we hesitated to speak, and for some moments lay quietly outstretched on the pine tassels where we had first thrown ourselves. Finally a voice broke the silence.

"Ask the old Major; he knows all about The person hers alluded to, under that military title, was myself. I hardly need explain to any Californian that it by no means followed that I was a "Major," or that I was "old," or that I knew anything about "it." or indeed whate it "referred to. The whole remark was merely one of the usual conventional feelers to conversation—a kind of social preamble quite common to our slangy camp intercourse. Nevertheless, as I was always known as the Major, perhaps for no better reason, than that the speaker, an old journalist, was always called Doctor, I recognized the fact so far as to kick aside an intervening saddle so that I could see the speaker's face on a level with my own, and ever make him enter the cabin again. "About ghosts," said the Doctor, after a pause, which nobody broke or was expected want to know. What are we doing here in this blank old mausoleum of Calaveras county, if it isn't to find out something about 'em, eh?" "Thar's that haunted house at Cave City.

Can't be more than a mile or two away, any how. Used to be just off the trail." A dead silence.

The Doctor (addressing space generally) -" Yes; sir; it was a mighty queer story." Still the same reposeful indifference. We all knew the Doctor's skill as a reconteur; fatal. Time and time again, in our prospecting experience, had a word of polite encouragement, a rash expression of interest even a too eager attitude of silent expectancy, brought the Doctor to a sudden change of subject; time and time again had we seen the unwary stranger stand amazed and bewildered between our own indifference and the sudden termination of a promising anecdote, through his own unlucky interference. So we said nothing. "The Judge" -another instauce of arbitrary nomenclature -pretended to sleep. Jack began to twist a vigacrito. Thornton bit off the ends of pine needles reflectively.

"Yes, sir," continued the Doctor, cosily resting the back of his head on the palms of his hands. "It was rather curious. All except the murder.
